2.6.15-26-386 bwahaha :) lol what does boot.log say? i was just thinking that and writing it down in my notes :P but i dont have the output to hand atm to make sure it's the kernel that's at fault, boot the kernel with a parameter ppi i would suggest booting the last bootkernel before the update: on a stock 12.04 the last kernel to boot is 2.6.32-17-generic nope, it is the last kernel up before the update: if you don't boot that, you won't be able to catch the last kernel upgrade in the logs once you boot that, try a logout and shutdown as this would be a fresh install, no corruptness issues? nope, i'm going to assume the updates went fine i want to give it another go... just to be sure ok... that did the trick. but now the screen goes black and i have to pull the plug :(guess i'll use the weekend to see if i can narrow down the problem or: live cds (if it is not your machine) If I do a system upgrade from 13.10, will the unapplied upgrade get reverted once I reboot? that is beyond my experience snimavat, ask in #ubuntu-devel sorry #ubuntu-release Thank you hitsujitMO hi guys is it possilbe to create a docker image for ubuntu server edition? YokoBR: Why not? hi 82157476af
